

The problem:

Over time, paint starts to go dull and weathered. The result is laborious polishing with, often, unsatisfactory results.

The different weathering and environmental influences the paint surface is exposed to damage the paint in the long term. Even UV rays on their own cause the paint to become dull and lose its shine. Add wind and dust, or go through the carwash, and you get matt paint surfaces and clearly visible scratches. Since products are unable to remove the haze, this even very frequently leads to a worsening of the deep shine, and makes polishing ever more difficult!
